The benefits of the international commodity trade are not shared fairly by all. Many producers and workers in developing communities struggle to meet their basic needs. They endure long hours, low pay, unsafe working environments and poor living conditions.

Fairtrade provides a more equitable alternative by:

Paying producers a fair price, and ensuring workers a decent wage; paying a premium to be used to invest in projects that benefit families, the local community and the environment, and; creating direct and long-term trading relationships between farmers and traders.

This means improved housing, healthcare, education and work practices.
